THE COWBOY.

A Graphic Description of the Animal.

The genus cowboy is not numerous hereabout, but what little of him we do have will be gratified with this description hereunto appended, which, naturally enough, comes a long ways from his tramping ground, being copied from the Philadelphia Press:

A genuine cowboy is worth describing. In many respects he is a wonderful creature. He endures hardships that would take the lives of most men, and is a perfect type of physical manhood. He is the finest horseman in the world, and exceeds in all the rude sports of the field. He aims to be a dead shot, and almost invariably is. Constantly during the herding season he rides seventy miles a day, and the larger part of the year sleeps in the open air. His life in the saddle makes him worship his horse, and it, with a rifle and six-shooter, completes his happiness. Of vice, in the ordinary sense, he knows nothing. He is a rough, brave, and generous creature, who never lies or cheats. It is a mistake to imagine they are a dangerous set. Anyone is as safe with them as with any people in the world, unless he steals a horse or is hunting for a fight. In their eyes, death is a mild punishment for horse-stealing. Indeed, it is the highest crime known to their unwritten law of the ranch. Their life, habits, education and necessities breed this feeling in them. But with all this disregard of human life, there are less murderers and cut-throats graduated from the cowboys, than from the better class for venture or gain. They delight in appearing rougher than they are.
To a tenderfoot, as they call an eastern man, they love to tell blood-curdling stories, and impress him with the dangers on the frontier.
But no man need get in a quarrel with them unless he seeks it, or get harmed unless he commits some crime.

Culverts and Bridges.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 3, 1888.

Editors Herald:

You can't travel about the city much without seeing the small wooden culverts, which cross the streets and cover the ditches, broken in here or there. After a while comes along the old gentleman with the one-horse "shay"—I mean cart —and repairs a break here or there.
Sometimes scarcely has he done and gone, when a heavy wagon will come along and into the culvert drops a wheel again. This signifies that the wood of the culvert is de-cayed, or that it is not strong enough for the traffic. But the same kind of stuff is used again for the culverts notwithstanding. It seems to me pretty well proved that two-inch plank is not thick enough for the purpose, seeing how often the culverts break in. Three-inch plank would be much better, and in the long run perhaps more economical. All the ditches in the city, where they cross streets or sidewalks, ought to be bridged or culverted a sufficient space in the streets to allow of the safe crossing of teams and vehicles. But it should be done in such a manner and with such material that the bridges or culverts would not be always giving way and leaving dangerous holes in the streets.
Why is there not a bridge built over Pugsley's mill pond, for the convenience of the traveling public? It is not pleasant to hear the ladies scoot with a will when they drive through the pond and have their fine silk dresses and other elegant and costly apparel splashed all over while going to or returning from the warm springs. Is it not full time that this little matter was properly attended to? CITIZEN.

CITY TAXES.

The Collector About to Sue.

In another column the city tax collector gives notice that the current year's taxes are delinquent, and unless paid will be collected with costs as provided by law. In answer to questions the collector stated yesterday that a good many taxpayers have not yet paid up. He will wait a few days, and no additional costs will accrue to those who settle during this time which he allows as a period of grace; after that he will proceed to levy on property for 1888 taxes and commence suit for other delinquencies as the law provides.
Such proceedings will necessarily incur costs—in many cases the costs exceeding the tax. But it is the collector's only recourse. His experience in the past has been that the majority of delinquents treat the warning he gives each year in the newspapers with silent indifference until a levy is made or suit commenced; then costs accrue and they complain of harshness. But where there is but one remedy afforded, no matter how unpleasant it may be, the duty of the collector is to apply it. This he positively intends to do, as the law authorizes no discretion.
